

CRIME QUIZ #3

How's Your Crime Detection IQ?

In every crime mystery story we see or read we consciously or subconsciously play the role of Sherlock Holmes in an attempt to sift through clues and pinpoint the culprit. We consider it a victory if we are able to deduce the guilty party before the unveiling! If we fail, we at least appreciate the author's cleverness in concealing the perpetrator so skillfully.

When a wealthy London merchant died he left his fortune to his two long lost sons. Two men showed up to claim the inheritance. One son proved he was related by identifying some well known scars on his father's body and knowledge of many personal aspects of his late father's life. The second man claiming to be the other son stated he had hunted extensively around the world - as the real son was known to have done. Having been a big game guide in Africa before he disappeared, he claimed: "I hunted bears in the Himalayas, shot elephants in India and trapped tigers in Africa."

Was there a good chance they both were his sons? EXPLAIN YOUR ANSWER.
