The Case of the Copied Test

Mr. Robertson liked to give his exams on a Friday when possible because it gave him time over the weekend to read and grade the essay questions. During the week before Easter break, Mr. Robertson had discussed the Louisiana Purchase on Wednesday and Thursday followed by a test on Friday. At the end of the day he picked up the papers that his students had piled on the corner of his desk as they finished the exam and left for home. When he examined the students papers over the weekend, he saw that the two papers above were almost exactly alike, and it was obvious that one of them had been copied. Look at the papers closely and see if you can find the points that Mr. Robertson found that convinced him one of the papers had been copied.

Can you tell who copied whom? List the items of evidence on which you base your decision.
